Welcome Message

On behalf of the Asian Association for Public Administration (AAPA) and the School of Public Policy and Management at Tsinghua University, it is our profound honor to welcome you to the 2025 AAPA Annual Conference in Beijing. We have gathered at a pivotal moment to reflect on a quarter-century of transformative change and to collectively shape the future of public administration across our dynamic region. Your presence, representing the brightest minds and most dedicated practitioners from across Asia and the world, is what truly makes this event a milestone.

Our theme, “Public Administration in Asia: The First Quarter of the the 21st Century and Beyond,” calls us to a crucial task. The past twenty-five years have seen remarkable feats in governance, poverty reduction, and digital modernization. Yet, as we look beyond, we are confronted by a new generation of complex challenges—from climate change and urban resilience to the ethical integration of artificial intelligence. This conference is our collaborative workshop, a space to critically examine our past, extract its vital lessons, and forge novel, sustainable solutions for the prosperity of all our communities.

The diverse conference tracks—from public service delivery and digital transformation to global governance—provide the framework for this essential work. We encourage you to engage deeply, challenge assumptions, and build bridges across disciplines and borders. Let us use this platform to strengthen the networks of cooperation essential for the challenges ahead. Thank you for your commitment. We wish you an inspiring, productive, and memorable conference.

AAPA President
Agus Pramusinto

Welcome Message

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

Welcome to Beijing, China! On behalf of the School of Public Policy and Management (SPPM) at Tsinghua University, it is my great honor and sincere pleasure to welcome you to the 2025 Annual Conference of the Asian Association for Public Administration (AAPA)!

This year holds special significance, marking both a milestone for our school and a critical juncture for public administration in Asia. Our school is commemorating its 25th Anniversary.

Established at the dawn of the new century, SPPM has consistently dedicated itself to advancing public administration education, research, and practice. At this momentous occasion, we need to reflect on our achievements, reaffirm our founding mission, and commit to the next generation of public service.

SPPM’s journey over the past quarter-century mirrors Asia’s rapid and complex evolution in governance. This era is defined by unprecedented technological acceleration, geopolitical shifts, and sustainability crises. Though resilience has been shown, governance challenges persist. At this critical juncture, we must assess these foundational shifts, grasp the institutional agility needed for global interconnectedness, and collectively define a prosperous trajectory for public administration in the decades ahead.

It is therefore with profound honor that we host this vital gathering under the theme: “Public Administration in Asia: The First Quarter of the 21st Century and Beyond.”

We are deeply grateful to AAPA for entrusting us as the host and for their steady support. Our team has united its efforts to ensure a well-organized and intellectually stimulating event, attracting a large number of high-quality, scholarly diverse submissions from around the world, which underscore the relevance and timeliness of our theme.

Your presence is a powerful testament to our shared commitment to the field of public administration and to the common good of all humankind. Over the conference, we will tackle the most pressing governance challenges and opportunities. I am confident that this gathering will be thrilling, affirming our dedication and enabling us to develop novel solutions together.

Thank you for being part of this important conference. We are truly delighted to have you here in Beijing during its most beautiful season.
